Another busy summer construction season set to start

Projects help keep Edmonton moving year-round

Edmonton, April 16, 2008 – The City is ready to continue building, paving, and rehabilitating streets to keep Edmonton moving 12 months a year. This is the busiest season ever with more than 100 roadway construction projects on the books, which will cost close to $300 million to complete.

This roadwork is essential to keep pace with the incredible development and growth the City is experiencing. Some of the major initiatives scheduled for this year include:

- 23 Avenue - Gateway Boulevard – interchange construction
- Whitemud Drive, 53 Avenue to 170 Street – road construction
- 82 Avenue/Mill Creek Bridge, 93 Street to 95A Street – bridge rehabilitation
- St. Albert Trail, Yellowhead Trail to 128 Avenue – road construction
- Yellowhead Trial from 142 Street to 170 Street – road repaving
- 170 Street from 90 Avenue to Stony Plain Road – road repaving

    - Neighbourhood Reconstruction Projects:

        1. Crestwood – second year of a two-year project.
        2. Parkview – second year of a two-year project.
        3. Parkdale – first year of two-year project.

The City deeply appreciates motorists' patience during construction season and ask that they do their part by obeying the speed limit in construction zones for their own safety and the safety of City of Edmonton workers.
